

The Life-Saving Power of Water Wells

Someone – usually a child – is dying every 20 seconds in the developing world from diarrheal diseases.

The diseases occur because people don't have access to safe water. They must rely on dirty water that no one wants to drink.

Those who survive must fight periodic sickness that prevents children from going to school and parents from working – creating a never-ending cycle of poverty.

To get water, people must often walk long distances. Women and girls do most of the walking. It's difficult (water is heavy) and it's dangerous (leaving them vulnerable to attacks by snakes, animals, and humans).

The time involved prevents many girls from being in school all day. They fall behind and often drop out – which continues the cycle of poverty.

Lifewater Canada has been drilling wells in Africa and Haiti since 1997 so people have safe and accessible water – just like you do.

Drilling wells is hot, dirty, and sometimes dangerous work.

But it produces amazing results!

It also produces healthy, happy, productive, and grateful people.

Many communities mark the completion of their new well with prayers and a ribbon-cutting ceremony.

We drill wells in public settings wherever they are needed, including at schools.

Each Lifewater Canada project in Africa and Haiti is meeting the needs of an average 400+ children and adults each day.

Helping that many people, while keeping overhead costs below 10%, has made Lifewater one of Canada's 10 best charities for the last five years in a row. It's one you can always trust.
