

Repairing hand-powered pumps saves lives!

Someone – usually a child – is dying every 20 seconds in the developing world from diarrheal diseases.

www.lifewater.ca

The diseases occur because people don't have access to safe water. They must rely on dirty water that no one wants to drink.

www.lifewater.ca

Those who survive must fight periodic sickness that prevents children from going to school and parents from working – creating a never-ending cycle of poverty.

To get water, people must often walk long distances. Women and girls do most of the walking. It's difficult (water is heavy) and it's dangerous (leaving them vulnerable to attacks by snakes, animals, and humans).

The time involved prevents many girls from being in school all day. They fall behind and often drop out – which continues the cycle of poverty.

Lifewater Canada has been providing safe water in Africa and Haiti since 1997.

We drill new water wells.

We also repair or replace broken hand pumps
on existing wells.

Some of the pumps we repair were installed by Lifewater, but most were installed by other organizations no longer available to fix them.

A few new parts and a couple of hours of labour can restore safe water in a community, and eliminate the need to walk long distances to gather dirty water.

Each Lifewater Canada project in Africa and Haiti is meeting the needs of an average 400+ children and adults each day.

Helping that many people, while keeping overhead costs below 10%, has made Lifewater one of Canada's 10 best charities for the last five years in a row. It's one you can always trust.
